A Field Guide to British Rivers George Heritage, Andy Large, David Milan, 2021-10-13 Temperate rivers are influenced by many factors including geology climate soils sediment type flow as well as human activity The complex interactions of the non anthropogenic controlling factors have led to a wonderful diversity of river type throughout the British Isles Sadly almost all rivers in the UK have suffered significant and long lasting modification by unsympathetic management that has all but destroyed this variety creating watercourses that are simplified conduits for water and sediment designed primarily to drain the land and reduce flood risk This volume aims to help reverse this illustrating using over 200 images and descriptions this variety of rivers in Britain highlighting the many forms that temperate river systems take and providing an accessible summary of the underlying river science knowledge base A Field Guide to British Rivers covers the full range of upland and lowland channel types and describes the full variety of substrate conditions from bedrock through boulder cobble and gravel to silt dominated systems The authors describe examples gathered from their extensive research and practical experience working with rivers throughout mainland Britain and set those examples in their wider landscape context to exemplify the natural functioning of temperate river types This book offers a practical and contextualised guide to contribute to efforts towards the sympathetic and sustainable restoration and re naturalisation of degraded channels in the UK Offering a unique viewpoint of both the underpinning science and the practicalities of river management A Field Guide to British Rivers is an essential a stand alone guide for anyone involved in river restoration and management as well as for those simply interested in rivers in general Written as a field guide to demonstrate practical examples of river types and to highlight the pressures they experience and their often parlous condition this book is intended to better inform both river management approaches and the policy necessary to achieve this Fundamentally the authors seek to demonstrate how the hydrological geomorphological and ecological functions of rivers and their catchments are inexorably intertwined and together how they generate and maintain rivers as dynamic entities

Parliamentary Documents in the Possession of Joseph Priestley Esq In China particularly in the eastern provinces of that immense empire multitudes of canals are every where met with most of which furnish undeniable evidence of their antiquity and of the skill of their original constructors The Royal Canal which was completed in the year 980 and occupied the labour of thirty thousand men for forty three years is a most stupendous monument of the enterprise ingenuity and perseverance of the ancient Chinese Its length of main line is upwards of eight hundred and twenty five miles and innumerable collateral branches are cut from it in every direction Upon the surface of this canal and its subsidiaries many thousand families live in vessels which form their travelling habitations and which they seldom quit from their birth till their decease And some idea may be formed of the traffic upon it when it is stated that the Emperor alone has ten thousand vessels constantly employed upon the different parts of its line About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works The Rivers of Great Britain, Etc ,1901
