

Sharks

There are many different types of sharks found in waters all around the world. Many people are very afraid of sharks because of how powerful and dangerous they can be. They can also be very interesting sea creatures once you take the time to learn some things about them.

Hammerhead sharks unusual name is based on the way that the shark's head is shaped. This shark uses its broad head to pin prey to the ocean floor. Its wide face also allows it to scan the ocean quickly. There are nine types of sharks just in the hammerhead family!

Sand tiger sharks are another type of shark. What makes this type of shark unique is that it is one of the only type of shark that comes to the surface for air. It does not need to air to breathe. It uses gulps of air to make itself lighter. When it is lighter, it can float more easily and move almost motionless while searching for prey.

Bull sharks are known to be one of the most aggressive types of sharks. They hunt during the day and at night. These sharks are special because they have been found swimming in freshwater areas!
